Cell phones, earpods emerging as a jobsite hazard

Personal cell phones, jobsites' most universal hazard!
The use of cell phones with earpods or other listening devices is creating a new jobsite hazard that managers everywhere are scrambling to deal with, since there are no current regulations in place that restrict their use. "People are just used to it, so that headphones and earpods are like a part of their body, so it's nothing for someone to come in from the parking area wearing them and walk onto the job, clock in, put on their protective gear and continue on to work with them in their ears," said Miller & Long Concrete Construction Vice President Frank Trujillo.
