Safety Tips - Distracted Driving & Driver Fatigue Tool Box Talk

The Distracted Driving Fact Sheets provide excellent teaching tips for safety meetings for safe driving both at work and personal driving. Page 4 identifies five (5) ways 'employers' can prevent distracted driving:

1. Ban texting and handheld phone use.
2. Consider banning use of hands-free phones.
3. Require workers to pull over to look up directions.
4. Communicate your company's cell phone and electronic devices policies and have them sign a compliance agreement.
5. Provide workers with regular information and reminders of the importance of focused and alert driving.

Checkout the Occupational Driving Safety Program Checklist available in the Fact Sheet!

New BD Best Practice: Physical Distance vs. Social Distance: Engaging Contacts in a "Contactless" Environment

As we move closer to a year of making social distancing a new way of describing the way we interact with one another, many lives, jobs and professions have been negatively impacted as a result. One profession that has historically been built around physical interaction is Business Development. When many states were shut down with shelter-in-place orders, the challenge of achieving results as a BD professional increased considerably. Add to that events cancelling, networking eliminated and the ability to "work a room" no longer in the equation and it feels as though you are dead in the water.

But there are many ways to maintain, grow and engage with clients and prospects in a productive way that can make you stand out and continue to be successful. In our latest BD Best Practice, Danielle Ferleto, Small Giants, discusses how to perpetuate business development efforts for continued success.

Construction Sector Adds 84,000 Workers In October, But Growing Number Of Project Cancellations Risks Undermining Future Industry Job Gains

Construction employment increased by 84,000 jobs in October, with jobs added in both nonresidential and residential categories, according to an analysis by the Associated General Contractors of America of government data released today. Association officials cautioned, however, that the pandemic is causing a growing number of construction projects to be canceled or delayed, according to a survey the association released in late October.

Crane Management in Construction Safety Training – Online Classes

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), from 2011 to 2015, the Census of Fatal Occupational Injuries (CFOI) reported 220 total crane-related deaths, an average of 44 per year over this 5-year period with 42% of the fatal work injuries taking place in the private construction industry. The data also shows that specialty contractors and heavy and civil engineering construction accounted for the most fatalities involving cranes in private construction.

AGC of America is offering this one-day training program based on OSHA standards and best practices to answer the need for quality training within the industry.
